

The Daily Courant.

Monday, March 26. 1722.

No. 6373.

London, March 26.
Yesterday arrived a Mail from France.

Moscow, February 16.

THE Diversions of the Russian Carnival which ended Yesterday, consisted principally of Processions made on Sledges, 60 in Number; their Show being the more agreeable, because none like it was ever seen here. The Machines on these Sledges represented a Fleet of small Vessels, and the Czar himself was on board a large Frigate. Their Order of March was as follows, viz.

I. The Car of Bacchus, followed by his Imperial Majesty's Buffoon, named Vitaschi, cloathed with a Bear's Skin, and drawn by 6 Cubs.

II. Another Sledge, drawn by 4 Hogs.

III. A Circassian, drawn by 10 Dogs.

IV. The Aides de Camp of the Knez-Pope, or Patriarch, 6 in Number, dressed like Cardinals, and mounted upon Oxen, saddled and bridled.

V. The Patriarch's Grand Car, himself there sitting on a Throne in his Pontifical Habit: His chief Officers standing by him, and he giving his Benediction to the Crowd as he passes along. At the fore Part of the Car sat old Silenus astride upon a Tun.

VI. The Knez-Cæsar, or a Figure representing the King of Russia, wearing a Regal Crown, accompanied by 2 Bears.

VII. Neptune mounted on his Car in the Form of a Shell; his Trident in his Hand, and a Couple of Tritons behind him.

VIII. The Emperour's own two deck'd Frigates, 30 Feet long, and mounted with 32 Guns; 8 of Brass, and the rest Wood; with 3 Masts, Flags, Sails, Cordage, &c. This great Machine was drawn only by 16 Horses: His Imperial Majesty, who commanded her, was dress'd in a Seaman's Habit, representing the Master of the Vessel.

IX. A Serpent-Marine, 100 Feet long, the Tail composed of 24 small Sledges fastened to each other, in which sat all sorts of People.

X. A great Barge, gilded and sail'd, in which sat the Empress in a Friesland Country-Woman's Habit.

XI. Prince de Menzikoff, dress'd like an Abbé, and all his Attendants, in a Barge.

XII. Princeps de Menzikoff in another Barge, with her Attendants, in Spanish Habits.

XIII. A Frigate armed for Fight, commanded by Admiral Count Apraxin, dress'd like an Hambourg Bomaster.

XIV. The Duke of Holstein's Boat, himself there attended by his Musick and 20 Holstein Peasants.

XV. The Boats belonging to foreign Ministers, attended by their Domesticks on Horseback richly dress'd.

XVI. The Prince of Moldavia's Car, the Prince in a Turkish Habit, seated under a Canopy, &c.

To recount all the Particulars of the rest of this Show, would be endless; let it suffice to say, that the Habits peculiar to both Sexes of every Nation were therein represented. The Grand Chancellour led the Polish Band; and M. Schapirof that of the German Probendaries or Canons.

On the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th Instant, these Publick Processions were repeated in several Parts of this City, and concluded 4-Nights with Feasts and Balls; the last Festival ended with a fine Firework. The great Frigate was employed in all these Shows, and all its Turnings were managed with surprizing Adroitness. On the second Day's Festival, the Empress changed her Habit, and her Imperial Majesty with her Ladies dress't themselves like Amazons; and the Gentlemen like Sailors. It is believed above 1000 Persons were in Masquerade on these Occasions.

Madrid, March 17. On the 14th Instant in the Afternoon their Catholick Majesties returned from Salustio to the Buen Retiro; the Prince and Princeps of Asturias and the rest of the Royal Family repaired thither the same Day, the Court designing to continue there till the Easter Holidays.
